DESCRIPTION

Objectives:

- Introduce participants to the structure and components of a revenue statement within financial modeling.
- Train participants to create revenue projections using realistic assumptions based on historical data and market trends.
- Enable hands-on practice in constructing a revenue statement using Excel, focusing on inputting and linking assumptions.
- Identify and evaluate key factors influencing revenue, such as sales growth, pricing strategies, and market conditions.
- Emphasize the importance of documenting assumptions and performing basic checks to validate the revenue model.

Key Takeaways:

- Revenue modeling starts with clear, well-defined assumptions tailored to the business context.
- Excel is a powerful tool for building dynamic revenue statements that can adapt to changing inputs.
- Understanding revenue drivers is critical for accurate financial projections and strategic planning.
- Small errors in assumptions can significantly impact revenue forecasts, highlighting the need for diligence.

Learning Outcomes:

- Participants are able to construct a basic revenue statement using Excel based on given assumptions.
- Participants gain the ability to identify and justify key revenue drivers in a financial model.
- Participants will develop skills to document assumptions and perform initial validation of their revenue projections.
- Participants will understand the practical application of revenue modeling in business decision-making, as informed by real-world insights.

Profile of resource person

Prof. Shrikrishnan Dikshidar is an accomplished business leader with 14 years of experience in investment banking, equity research, and financial services. His expertise includes financial modeling, equity research, due diligence, private equity, and operations management.

- Would like to attend more sessions on this and learn.
- The above session was good
- Explanation should be bit slow.
- Could have taken more time to explain things better and in pace with students

No suggestions required

The session was very interactive and knowledgeable.

The overall session was very good and relevant with are subjects but speed of teaching is little fast which is maybe create difficulty for the students who perform such shortcuts for the first time.

Must go bit slow

I would really like to attend more sessions!

Excellent knowledge has been provided by him to us of financial modelling

All good

It was a very good session. Loved it
