Learning Outcomes:

The learning outcomes from Speakers in Induction sessions were:

Day 1

Mr. Anup Munshi's lecture on provided students with a strong perspective on how academic knowledge serves as the foundation for long-term professional success. He emphasized that while theoretical understanding is important, its real value lies in how effectively it is applied in the workplace. Students learned the importance of aligning their academic efforts with industry needs, and how skills such as communication, problem-solving, and decision-making are essential for leadership roles.

Another key learning outcome was the significance of personal values, ethics, and continuous self-improvement in building a meaningful career. Mr. Munshi's real-life examples and insights from his 35 years of corporate leadership experience helped students understand the practical challenges of the professional world. The session inspired them to take ownership of their career paths and to view every stage of their academic journey as a stepping stone toward becoming capable and responsible professionals.

Day 2

Dr. Amanpal Singh Chawla's session on "Global Skills, Local Impact: Thriving in a Competitive World" offered valuable insights into the evolving demands of the global workforce. Students gained a clearer understanding of how essential global competencies—such as communication, critical thinking, and cultural intelligence—are in navigating today's interconnected professional landscape. The talk encouraged participants to view themselves as global citizens capable of contributing meaningfully at both local and international levels.

A key learning outcome was the emphasis on applying globally acquired skills to create positive change within local communities. Dr. Chawla highlighted the importance of adaptability, lifelong learning, and innovation in building a sustainable and impactful career. Students left the session with a renewed perspective on personal and professional growth, feeling more equipped to compete globally while remaining rooted in their values and local context.
